"AN INDEPENDENTLY OWNED AND OPERATED BUDGET SYSTEM LICENSEE"

Accused Boston bomber to face 30 charges

BOSTON (AFP) - A US grand jury on Thursday indicted teenager Dzhokhar Tsarnaev on 30 counts in connection with the April double bomb attack on the Boston marathon that killed three people and injured more than 260.

The counts include using a weapon of mass destruction and causing death by bombing a public place. Federal prosecutors said 17 of the charges carry a possible death penalty.

Tsarnaev is to be formally arraigned in Boston district court on July 10, prosecutors said in a statement announcing the charges after weeks of questioning the man at his prison hospital bedside.

Tsarnaev and his brother Tamerlan are accused of leaving two pressure cooker bombs at the marathon finish line on April 15 that sprayed nails and other metal debris into the huge crowds.

The ethnic Chechen Muslim brothers are also said to have killed a campus police officer at Massachusetts Institute of Technology during the giant manhunt that followed.

Tamerlan, 26, was killed in a gun battle with police four days after the attack. Hours later, Dzhokhar, 19, was found in a boat in a Boston suburb back garden and caught after another showdown.

The university student suffered a bullet wound to his throat and was said to be only communicating by writing answers on paper.

The indictment says that while hiding in the boat, the critically wounded Tsarnaev wrote on it: "The US government is killing innocent civilians."

"I can't stand to see such evil go unpunished," he added. "We Muslims are one body, you hurt one, you hurt us all."

Charges announced by prosecutors include use of a weapon of mass destruction resulting in death, bombing a public place resulting in death, malicious destruction of property resulting in death, using a firearm causing death and carjacking.

The indictment alleges that the brothers conspired to carry out the attack on the 117th Boston Marathon from February this year.

Video released by police at the time showed two young men walking calmly through the crowds to place backpacks which it later emerged contained pressure cooker bombs.

The bombs were detonated seconds apart, killing a boy, a Chinese student and a woman restaurant manager. At least 13 of the injured had limbs torn off.

The bombs "were designed to shred skin, shatter bone, and cause extreme pain and suffering, as well as death," said the indictment.

Commission Bon Boluntad (Committee of Goodwill) 2013 introduced

The Committee members and Marylin de Kort from the Aruba Youth Parliament who concerned with the interests of first time voters.

Birgit Kreykenbohm will act as media liaison and the KvK will administrate and act as Secretariat of the CBB, through the services of its Director Leo Maduro and staffer Ivi Hernandez-Swaen.

Aruba's political parties are expected to respect the purpose of the commission and sign an agreement to submit to their scrutiny and abide by their findings. Some have already agreed to this, including the RED Party headed by Rudy Lampe.

As stated by CBB 2013 President Glenn Thodé, the Commission is an acknowledgment by Aruban political hopefuls to maintain a well-run, honest campaign with nonpartisan supervision. This requires complete cooperation of all political parties and candidates.

This year, Commissioner Hassell promised to control spontaneous political rallies and demonstrations that interfere with the flow of daily life and traffic on Aruba. Motorcades will be limited so as not to disrupt business and inconvenience the public. Permits for political demonstrations must be obtained and conducted in areas which will not create difficulty for emergency vehicles.

The CBB can be contact at telephone number 582-1120 ext 34/41 or via e-mail: secretariat@arubachamber.com. For more information on the CBB, its function and the laws enabling it, visit the KvK website: <http://www.arubachamber.com/downloads/others/commission-bon-boluntad>

Aruba's first sleep away camp announced for this summer: "Camp Blast"

Camp Organizers and Sharmaine Tromp of Hard Rock

The owners of Rancho Diamari Stables have refurbished a lovely hacienda on Aruba's north coast, very close to Diamari Beach, which they have decided to deploy as a summer camp over the month of July. Organizers of the camp, Isabel Silva-Finol and Head Guide/Counselor Javier Chavez joined Hard Rock Marketing Manager Sharmaine Tromp and Camp Promoter Farrah Boekhoudt at the Hard Rock Cafe in Palm Beach to announce that parents now have an exciting alternative for their children this year.

Camp Blast will conduct three weeks of organized activities where each camper will be treated like a "VIP" kid. The camp is for children ages five to through twelve. They will accept only 50-60 campers and parents can inscribe their youngsters for one week or all three, as they choose. All meals, snacks, refreshments, tours and activities are included in the fee.

Camp Blast is unique in that the children will have the unusual experience of an authentic sleep-away camp, unlike the day camps that are prevalent on Aruba. The facility is recently enlarged and refurbished, with a beautiful pool deck and courts for volleyball, table tennis and there will be regular excursions on horseback. It is also ideally located for nature hikes through Arikok National Park. Organizers a emphasized they will address a healthy mind in a healthy body, with reading and craft sessions to entertain the youngsters and stimulate development in all areas, including dancing and singing. Regularly schedule bus tours will include lunch stops and events at restaurants such as Hard Rock Cafe, Scala and Pizza Hut. Organizers assured that utmost care will be taken with the supervision and safety of the campers.

The first week of Camp Blast will begin on Monday, July 15, each new session will commence the Monday of the following week. The last week of camp will be July 29 through August 5. Parents wishing more information or to sign up their children can call 6900573 or 5681801 or e-mail: summercamp2013@outlook.com

First Oncology Department Open House was a resounding success

The first Open House organized by the Dr. Horacio E. Oduber Hospital Oncology Department was deemed a huge success by department staff. Many made good use of this opportunity to get acquainted with the department, the friendly staff and all the services they perform. The Open House took place on Friday, June 21, from 10:00 a.m. until 2:00 p.m. in the beautiful new building where Dr. Casper Laclé has his offices.

Internist, oncologist and hematologist Dr. Roel Jonkhoff expressed he is very happy with the positive outcome of the Open House. "I find my job at the hospital is very satisfying. This Open House gave everyone the opportunity to see what really happens behind the curtains. Our Oncology Department can be compared to those in the U.S.A. and the Netherlands; we work with the same standards and demands."

The building which houses the Oncology Department is large, well-fitted and more than adequate for the consult hours practiced there. It has all the technology for chemo therapy and oncology treatment. In case a cancer patient, due to distinctly individual circumstances, cannot receive treatment on Aruba, the department can opt to send the patient to either Colombia or the Netherlands. In some exceptional cases, they may travel to the U.S.

The Oncology Department is a vital necessity for Aruba, especially with an increased population and a corresponding incidence of cancer related cases.

US warns of 'grave' impact if Ecuador takes in Snowden

WASHINGTON (AFP) - The United States on Thursday warned Ecuador it would create "grave difficulties" in bilateral ties if Quito grants asylum to fugitive US intelligence leaker Edward Snowden.

But a US official also denied that a bilateral trade pact was being used as "blackmail" in the case, insisting that Washington wanted to maintain a good economic relationship with Quito.

"What would not be a good thing is them granting Mr Snowden asylum. That would have grave difficulties for our bilateral relationship," acting deputy State Department spokesman Patrick Ventrell said.

"If they take that step, that would have very negative repercussions."

Ecuador dropped out of a trade pact with the United States on Thursday claiming it had become an instrument of "blackmail" as Quito considers Snowden's asylum request.

But Ventrell said the preferential trade program, which covers key Ecuadorian exports such as fresh-cut roses, fruits, vegetables and tuna, was granted by Congress and Quito could not withdraw unilaterally.

Friend testifies over shooting victim's phone call

MIAMI (AFP) - A key witness in the Trayvon Martin murder trial was grilled in court Thursday about her cell phone call with the teen shooting victim minutes before he was killed by a volunteer neighborhood watchman.

Rachel Jeantel, 19, a close friend of Martin's who said she was on the phone with him during his final minutes alive, testified that the unarmed teen said he was being pursued and appeared to have been accosted during the fatal encounter on a rainy night in February of last year.

According to Jeantel, Martin told her during their phone call that "he was being followed by a creepy ass cracker" -- a pejorative term employed by some African-Americans to refer to whites.

In hours of testimony that spanned over two days, Jeantel recounted that she was chatting on the phone with Martin as he walked through the gated community, when he became aware that he was being followed.

She said she heard an angry exchange of words, including Martin demanding of the man "why you following me for?"

"A hard-breathing man," she said, responded "what are you doing around here?"

Jeantel testified that there were "noises" and that she heard the teen yell "get off, get off. The phone call then cut off."

During cross-examination, Zimmerman's defense attorney Don West noted minor inconsistencies in the account of the story Jeantel told on the witness stand and what she said in the days immediately following the shooting.

Martin, 17, was visiting a family friend in the neighborhood and was coming back from a convenience store just before his run-in with Zimmerman.

The son of an American father and a Peruvian mother, Zimmerman has denied any racial motive in the killing, saying he shot Martin only because he feared his life was in danger.

A jury of six women is hearing the second degree murder trial of Zimmerman, a case that inflamed racial tensions in the United States.

Florida investigators initially opted not to press charges in the case, setting off a furor, with Martin's supporters alleging racism and pointing to the fact that the teenager was carrying no weapon at the time of his death and had no criminal record.

US Senate passes comprehensive immigration reform

WASHINGTON (AFP) - After months of wrangling, the US Senate on Thursday overwhelmingly passed its comprehensive immigration reform bill that aims to put 11 million undocumented people on a path to citizenship.

Chants of "Yes we did!" erupted from the public galleries after senators voted 68-32 to approve the landmark legislation, which bolsters border security, revamps legal immigration and requires a 13-year wait before those without papers can apply for citizenship.

President Barack Obama hailed the vote, saying "Today, with a strong bipartisan vote, the United States Senate delivered for the American people, bringing us a critical step closer to fixing our broken immigration system once and for all."

Fourteen Republicans joined a unanimous Democratic side in what Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid deemed a historic vote, as he took the rare move of calling on members to cast votes from their Senate desks, as Vice President Joe Biden presided over the chamber.

The measure now faces a rocky road in the Republican-led House of Representatives, but Schumer and Republican Gang of 8 Senator John Mc-Cain made a direct appeal to their colleagues on the other side of the US Capitol: work with us to achieve the most important immigration reform in a quarter century.

"To our friends in the House, we ask for your consideration, and we stand ready to sit down and negotiate with you," McCain said.

"We may have different views on different aspects of this issue but we should all of us here have the same goal, and that is to take 11 million people out of the shadows, secure our borders, and make sure this is a nation of opportunity and freedom."

Missoni heir's plane found in Venezuela: official

CARACAS (AFP) - A small plane that disappeared in January off the coast of Venezuela with six people aboard, including the scion of Italy's Missoni fashion family, has been found, officials said Thursday.

Foreign Minister Elias Jaua said authorities would now search the wreckage for the bodies of the two pilots and four passengers who had left Los Roques islands on January 4 en route to Caracas.

Jaua said the Italian government provided technology to search for the missing plane.

The plane was carrying a pilot, a co-pilot and four passengers, including 58-year-old Vittorio Missoni -- the son of the eponymous fashion label's founder Ottavio Missoni -- his wife Maurizia Castiglioni and another Italian couple when it vanished.

Vittorio Missoni was the fashion house's marketing director.

Ottavio Missoni, a knitwear innovator whose distinctive colorful zigzag designs became a global fashion empire, died on May 9 in his home and company headquarters in the northern Italian town of Sumirago at the age of 92.

Italian media quoted people close to the patriarch as saying that he had not been himself since his son's disappearance, and had refused to talk about it.

Indian reporter in flood video scandal sacked: channel

NEW DELHI (AFP) - An Indian television journalist who reported on deadly floods in the north of the country while perched on a survivor's shoulders has been sacked, the head of the channel told AFP.

"What he did was very inhuman. You cannot ride on someone's back for a story. We terminated him on Tuesday," said Nishant Chaturvedi, channel head at News Express.

Narayan Pargaien, reporting on the flash floods and landslides in Uttarakhand state, triggered outrage after a video clip went viral on the Internet showing him speaking into the camera while sitting on the shoulders of a local villager.

The reporter claimed that the survivor, who can be seen wobbling under the strain while standing in ankle-high water, had hoisted him onto his shoulders as a sign of respect.

The man "wanted to show me some respect, as it was the first time someone of my level had visited his house," Pargaien said in an interview to Indian media website newslaundry.com on Tuesday.

Some 1,000 people have died in flash floods and landslides caused by heavy downpours in India's Uttarakhand state, known as the "Land of the Gods" for its revered Hindu shrines.

Helicopters and soldiers have evacuated tens of thousands of people, but several thousand pilgrims and tourists remain stranded throughout the state since early rains struck on June 15.

The channel is planning to post the controversial video on its own website to stress that it did not endorse the reporter's conduct.

Brazil's Rousseff pushes plebiscite amid new protests

BRASILIA (AFP) - Brazilian President Dilma Rousseff met Thursday with her allies and the opposition to work out details of a plebiscite on political reform as street protests flared anew, albeit on a smaller scale.

After talks with Justice Minister Eduardo Cardozo, Rousseff began receiving members of her leftist ruling coalition. She was due also to meet with top lawmakers later in the day.

The series of meetings came as thousands of demonstrators massed outside Ceara State University in the northeastern city of Fortaleza, where Spain were to face Italy in a Confederations Cup semi-final.

"Get ready, it's time to change the history of our country," read one banner.

The mass demonstrations, which began more than two weeks ago against a background of anemic economic growth and rising inflation, coincide with the Confederations Cup -- a dry run for the 2014 World Cup, which Brazil will host for the first time since 1950.

Protesters are clamoring for better public services and tougher penalties against corrupt politicians. They are also angry about the $15 billion Brasilia spent to host the two high-profile football tournaments.

Feeling the heat from the streets, Congress has been rushing through a series of bills that had been kept on hold for years.

The Senate has backed tougher penalties on corruption. It also scrapped a proposed constitutional amendment that sought to curb the investigative powers of independent public prosecutors.

The Supreme Court meanwhile ordered the detention of lawmaker Natan Donadon, who was sentenced to 13 years in jail in 2010 for embezzlement -- the first such move in 25 years.

In other concessions to the protesters, the House of Deputies backed a bill that would allocate 75 percent of oil royalties to education and 25 percent to health.

The bill now goes to the Senate, but some of the articles could face a presidential veto as Rousseff said she wanted 100 percent of the revenues to go to education.

The government also announced plans to create 35,000 jobs in the public health sector, open to Brazilian doctors, but also foreigners if necessary. Some 12,000 medical experts are also to be trained in priority sectors.

The plebiscite proposed by Rousseff would be non-binding and allow for debate of several issues, including election campaign finance and the voting system.

But opposition parties have made it clear they think it is up to Congress to craft a political reform which the electorate can then approve or reject in a referendum.

Leaders of the Senate and the House of Deputies -- both members of the Brazilian Democratic Movement Party, which is part of the ruling coalition -- have endorsed the idea of a plebiscite, and the government hopes to submit a concrete proposal to Congress next Tuesday.

Health & Living Italy bans sale of electronic cigarettes to minors

ROME (AFP) - Italy banned the sale of electronic cigarettes containing nicotine to minors on Thursday and forbid their use in schools, amid criticism from a consumer watchdog that the move did not go far enough.

Health Minister Beatrice Lorenzin "bans the sale of electronic cigarettes with nicotine to minors under the age of 18," her ministry said in a statement.

"We don't want to say that electronic cigarettes are more dangerous than normal cigarettes but they should not be used as harmless objects," Lorenzin told Rai television.

"People need to be informed about what they use... water and aroma (capsules) are one thing, but nicotine can create dependencies," she added.

Italian consumer association Codacons criticised the new law as "utterly insufficient".

"E-cigarettes should be banned in all public places, just like normal cigarettes. It's not clear why the ministry believes they are dangerous, and therefore should be banned in schools, but not in other places open to the public," Codacons president Carlo Rienzi said.

NEW DELHI (AFP) : Indian doctors prepare 1-year old girl Roona Begum, suffering from hydrocephalus, a buildup of fluid inside the skull that leads to swelling, for surgery at a hospital in Gurgaon on the outskirts of New Delhi on June 27, 2013. Indian doctors said yesterday they successfully carried out comprehensive reconstructive surgery on the skull of a baby suffering from a rare disorder that caused her head to nearly double in size. The four-hour-long surgery on the skull of one-year-old Roona Begum was carried out at a hospital near New Delhi where last month surgeons also drained fluid from the youngster's head in a life-saving operation.

TOKYO - A mouse has been cloned from a single drop of blood, Japanese scientists have reported. Blood cells from a donor mouse's tail were collected and used to make the cloned female mouse, which went on to reproduce and live a regular lifespan. The findings of the study, published in the journal Biology of Reproduction, state the researchers 'demonstrated for the first time that mice could be cloned using the nuclei of peripheral blood cells'. Furthermore, the cells 'could be used for cloning immediately after collection and no donor animals need to be euthanised'.

China, S. Korea agree to push N.Korea denuclearisation

BEIJING (AFP) - China and South Korea will keep pushing to end North Korea's nuclear programme, their leaders declared at a high-profile summit between Pyongyang's closest ally and its key rival.

"We have agreed that under any circumstances, North Korea's nuclear (weapons) are unacceptable and confirmed that the denuclearisation of the Korean peninsula is of common interest for the two countries," South Korean President Park Geun-Hye told reporters as she sat beside Chinese President Xi Jinping.

China has previously supported North Korea's denuclearisation and is the chair of a multinational forum -- the six-party talks -- aimed at achieving it, but has also tended to prioritise regional stability, for decades acting as the sole major ally and economic lifeline to the unpredictable North.

South Korea, which does not have nuclear weapons, and ally the United States, have made it clear they will never accept the idea of North Korea as a nuclear state, and insist Pyongyang must show a tangible commitment to abandoning its nuclear weapons if it wants substantive talks.

Both have pressured China to use more of its leverage to rein in Pyongyang.

Xi, for his part, described the situation on the divided peninsula as "currently changing in a positive direction", apparently referring to recent offers by Pyongyang to pursue dialogue, including hinting at a return to long-stalled six-nation nuclear talks aimed at shuttering its nuclear programme.

The forum -- which groups North Korea, China, South Korea, Japan, Russia and the United States -- is aimed at achieving Pyongyang's abandonment of its nuclear weapons programme in return for aid and security guarantees.

The North appears in recent months to have moderated its stance after a series of belligerent statements and gestures against the South and the US early this year, including threats of nuclear war.

In February the North carried out its third underground nuclear test in defiance of UN Security Council resolutions, sending tensions soaring and raising fears of possible conflict.

While a planned meeting with South Korea earlier this month fell through, Pyongyang has offered direct talks with Washington, and has sent two envoys to Beijing since late May to express a willingness for dialogue.

China's relationship with North Korea -- famously described by Mao Zedong as being as close as "lips and teeth" -- was forged in the 1950-53 Korean War which China entered to prevent the North's total defeat.

Microsoft wants to disclose US government data queries

SAN FRANCISCO (AFP) - Microsoft has joined Google in a legal push for permission to disclose more information about secret government requests for data, according to a US court filing made public.

came a day after a similar petition by Google.

The US technology titans argue that they want to reassure people who use their products and services in the aftermath of revelations that the National Security Agency had accessed vast amounts of data in a surveillance program under the supervision of the special court, which operates in secret.

Microsoft asked the court to grant it permission to disclose aggregate data about government requests that are deemed secret, noting that deputy counsel general John Frank has 'top secret' clearance with the Department of Defense.

Google has asked the court for permission to reveal numbers of government requests for data from the Internet giant.

Google said it already publishes in its "transparency report" data on requests from law enforcement and so-called National Security Letters from the FBI.

FISA refers to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, which authorized the secret court.

Google said it was seeking a court ruling to allow it to publish "limited, aggregate statistics" on orders for the company to hand over data.

Both Google and Microsoft lawyers argued that the companies have a right under the First Amendment of the US Constitution to speak up in their own defense regarding a spying program being discussed by political officials.

Portugal hit by general strike against austerity

LISBON (AFP) - Public transport crawled to a standstill and flights were grounded in Portugal Thursday as workers staged their fourth general strike in two years against austerity measures adopted in return for a massive international bailout.

"This is an exceptional strike in terms of worker participation," said Armenio Carlos, the head of the country's biggest union, the Communist-led General Confederation of Portuguese Workers.

Portugal's second-largest union, the General Union of Workers, which had worked with the government on a reform of the labour code, seconded the strike call, a sign of dwindling patience with spending cuts and tax increases.

Its secretary general Carlos Silva said "the goals of the strike have been reached", claiming that five million people followed the stoppage, or half of the active population.

The last time the two unions banded together in a general strike was in November 2011, just five months after Prime Minister Pedro Passos Coelho's centre-right coalition took office.

The unions are angered over a fresh package of austerity measures unveiled in May that include raising the weekly work hours of state employees from 35 to 40 and slashing 30,000 out of 700,000 jobs in the bureaucracy.

The government says the measures will reduce public spending by 4.7 billion euros ($6.1 billion) by 2015.

Thousands of people marched through the historic centre of Lisbon to parliament, whose broad marble staircase was protected by a police cordon.

Banners read: "Enough!" or "Government Out!"

Demonstrations were held in several other cities including Oporto, Portugal's second city, and Faro in the south.

Portugal is struggling to apply radical budget and economic reforms in exchange for bailout loans of 78 billion euros ($102 billion) agreed by the so-called troika -- the European Union, the European Central Bank and the International Monetary Fund -- in May 2011.

But as in Greece and Ireland, other eurozone countries that needed a financial lifeline, falling living standards have stoked outrage at the austerity measures.

Defiant Ecuador drops US trade deal over Snowden case

QUITO (AFP) - A defiant Ecuador dropped out of a trade pact with the United States on Thursday, claiming it had become an instrument of "blackmail" as Quito considers asylum for fugitive US intelligence leaker Edward Snowden.

The leftist government also offered the United States $23 million in "economic aid" for "human rights training" to prevent attacks on people's privacy, torture and extrajudicial executions.

"Ecuador unilaterally and irrevocably renounces these preferential customs tariff rights," Communications Minister Fernando Alvarado said, reading a government statement.

"Ecuador does not accept pressure or threats from anyone, and does not trade on principles or make them contingent on commercial interests, even if those interests are important," he said.

The government of leftist President Rafael Correa said that while it had received the preferential rights in exchange for its cooperation in the war on drugs, they had become a "new instrument of blackmail."

The preferential trade program, which covers key Ecuadorian exports such as fresh-cut roses, fruits, vegetables and tuna, was set to expire on July 31 unless the US Congress renewed it.

The arrangement, which dates back to the early 1990s, originally benefited four Andean nations, and Ecuador was the last country still participating in it. But analysts have warned that Washington may refuse to renew it if Quito grants asylum to Snowden.

The United States is Ecuador's main trade partner, buying 40 percent of the Andean nation's exports, or the equivalent of $9 billion per year.

The 30-year-old Snowden, a former National Security Agency contractor who embarrassed the government of US President Barack Obama by revealing details of vast Internet and phone surveillance programs, has requested asylum from Ecuador.

US stocks rally on economic data, Fed comments

NEW YORK (AFP) - US stocks Thursday closed solidly higher for a third straight day following positive economic data and comments from a top Federal Reserve official that the Fed would not hastily end its stimulus program.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average rose 114.35 (0.77 percent) to 15,024.49, closing above 15,000 for the first time since June 19.

The broad-based S&P 500 added 9.94 points (0.62 percent) to 1,613.20, while the tech-rich Nasdaq Composite Index increased 25.64 (0.76 percent) to 3,401.86.

The gains followed a drop in jobless claims and a big increase in pending home sales, fresh evidence that economic growth remains steady.

Suggesting that markets had over-reacted to Fed policy statements last week, William Dudley, chief of the Fed's New York branch, emphasized that it would not end its bond-buying stimulus program if the economy does not live up to current forecasts.

Most of the companies in the Dow ended higher, including Boeing (up 2.4 percent) and UnitedHealth Group (up 2.0 percent).

Bank of America added 2.0 percent, JPMorgan Chase 1.2 percent, and Wells Fargo 1.3 percent.

Dish Network rose 3.1 percent after it withdrew its bid to acquire Clearwire, clearing the path for Sprint's full takeover of Clearwire. Clearwire fell

2.1 percent, while Sprint slipped 0.1 percent.

ConAgra Foods rose 5.1 percent after reporting earnings of 60 cents per share, one cent above expectations. The company expects higher profits in 2014 and at least 10 percent per-year profit growth in fiscal 2015-2017.

Research in Motion fell 2.9 percent one day ahead of a company earnings report that is expected to reveal how the company's much-advertised smartphone is performing.

Bed Bath & Beyond dipped 0.2 percent after reporting earnings of 93 cents per share, 21 cents less than expected.

Payroll processor Paychex fell 3.7 percent after missing earnings estimates by 11 cents per share and posting revenues of $585.3 million, below the $610.8 million expected.

Bond prices rose. The yield on the 10-year US Treasury fell to 2.48 percent from 2.54 percent late Wednesday, while the 30-year declined to 3.55 percent from 3.57 percent. Bond prices move inversely to yields.

'Sopranos' fans mourn Gandolfini at funeral

NEW YORK (AFP) - Family, friends and fans united in grief Thursday in an emotional sendoff for James Gandolfini, star of the hit TV series "The Sopranos."

Gandolfini, a three-time Emmy winner for his portrayal of emotionally vulnerable New Jersey mobster Tony Soprano, died June 19 after a heart attack in a hotel in Rome, where he was traveling with his 13-year-old son. He was 51.

Mourners converged on the Cathedral of Saint John the Divine, an Episcopal church that is among the world's biggest, well before the mid-morning start of Gandolfini's funeral.

Some 1,500 people filled the pews, including Governor Chris Christie of New Jersey, the state across the Hudson River from New York City where Gandolfini was born and "The Sopranos" was set.

Present as well for the two-hour funeral were cast members of the HBO series, whose creator David Chase delivered a eulogy in the form of a letter to his fellow American of Italian heritage.

"We both loved family, work, people, food, alcohol, talking," said Chase, who remembers his friend as "a sad boy, loving and confused... That's why I think you were such a great actor, because of that boy inside."

Others in attendance included actor Alec Baldwin, like Gandolfini a veteran of Broadway theater, and Edie Falco, who played Tony Soprano's wife Carmela in the series that ran from 1999 to 2007.

Gandolfini's second wife Deborah Lin Gandolfini spoke of a loving husband and attentive father to their nine-month-old daughter Liliana who was "always trying to help someone."

Emotions were no less strong outside the cathedral.

"We've been up since 4:30 this morning," said Stephanie Solana, a fan who traveled to the Upper West Side from The Bronx with her two granddaughters to pay her respects.

On Wednesday, family and close friends gathered away from prying cameras for an invitation-only private viewing at a funeral home in Park Ridge, New Jersey, near where the actor grew up.

Gandolfini had a long film and stage career before lending his heavy stature and big grin to play a depressed mafioso in "The Sopranos," the celebrated series that ran from 1999 to 2007 in the United States.

The son of an Italian bricklayer was in Italy for the Taormina Film Fest in Sicily where he was to have received an award and participate in a roundtable discussion last weekend.

Winfrey heads Forbes celeb 'power' list

California-based market research firm.

Winfrey made an estimated $77 million between June 2012 and June 2013, significantly less than other rivals on the list but came out on top after scoring well in areas such as press mentions and social networking power, Forbes.com said.

In second place was eccentric pop star Lady Gaga, who earned $80 million in the same period, while Hollywood titan Steven Spielberg was third. The legendary director and producer earned a cool $100 million in the past year.

The next three spots were occupied by women from the music world, with Beyoncé Knowles in fourth ($53 million), Madonna in fifth ($125 million) and Taylor Swift ($55 million).

Rock band Bon Jovi took seventh with $79 million while Swiss tennis ace Roger Federer was the only athlete to make the list as he came in eighth.

Federer, sensationally dumped out of Wimbledon in the second round on Wednesday, pocketed $71 million.

Rounding out the top 10 were singer Justin Bieber ($58 million) and television comedienne Ellen DeGeneres ($56 million).

The list can be found at www.forbes.com/celebrities.

NEW YORK (AFP) - Television talk show queen Oprah Winfrey was named the most powerful celebrity in the world on Wednesday as Forbes.com released its annual list of the top movers and shakers in the entertainment industry.

Winfrey, 59, who was ranked in the top spot despite her signature daytime television show Oprah ending its 25-year run in 2011, headed a 100-strong list which featured six women in the top 10.

Forbes.com uses a complex methodology to come up with its list, taking into account various factors including earnings, the number of mentions each celebrity gets in print and television and their Internet presence before deciding the rankings.

The website also gives each celebrity a marketability score out of 100 developed by a Cal-

Aruba's Freestyle Windsurfer Steven Max battles for gold in France and wins!

MARSEILLE - This years IFCA Freestyle Youth World championship was once again held in France during the SOSH Freestyle Cup 2013, and once again the competitors came from far and all over the globe, including, Russia, Israel, Italy, Belgium and Aruba to compete for the most wanted title of Youth world-champion.

Day one started off with a promising but chilly breeze and competitors took to the water with great enthusiasm, which quickly turned in to disappointment as the wind died almost completely within the first heat and the competition had to be postponed.

Conditions did not get better on day two, leaving the frustrated sailors with lot's of games and other windless water activities to do on a overall beautiful fun filled and sunny day, but sadly no windsurfing could be done, due to lack of wind.

Day 3 brought no difference and tensions started to get higher, as these athlete's were getting restless and eager to show off their moves.

On Friday, day 3 the wind still did not return and the day was spend much like the days before, on land playing games and waiting for the wind to pick up.

All hopes were up and so was the wind the morning of day four as the Freestylers took to the water once again.

During the first double elimination Steven Max (15) climbed his way up to the top 4 position eliminating the 16 year old Italian Riccardo Marca and France's Sam Esteve (15) to face off Israel's champion Johnny Yagen, who managed to conquer the heat due to light winds which were in his advantage, while Steven could not pull out his big moves and he took second place.

During the rest of the day they were able to complete a double elimination, in which Steven had to win several heats to get back in the finals to face off Johnny again, winning this heat by landing amazing and high moves, one of them a "Punch", in the face of the Jury.

Alas in Steven's second attempt to conquer first place, during a very tight race, it was Johnny who went home with first place, taking advantage of the light wind conditions once again, which hampered Steven to do any power moves and he lost the first place position. Leaving Steven frustrated, but the morning of day 5, got all competitors in a good mood, as they continued their battle under great conditions. Steven flew through the first heats, eliminating each and everyone, including yesterday's very determined to do better on the next and final day of competition, praying for more wind.

An early and windy start in champion in the final heat, even though by then the wind had died considerably.

After a quick lunch off they went again, everyone ready to see who was going to be the overall winner of the final day's double elimination.

Again Johnny Yagen managed to go all the way to the finals to meet up with the champion of the day Steven Max, he needed to win twice to beat Steven, when just before the start of the final heat, disaster struck and Johnny was injured. He was taken care of by the medics on site, but luckily recovered quick enough to keep competing and after the "Makani-fin" Supersession, the battle continued.

Landing huge aerial moves and making good use of the 2 meter swell, Steven Max won the "Supersession" and the final against Johnny right after that, as well.

The decision was clear, the competition fierce and very close, but Steven Max scored just above Johnny, making him this years Junior World Champion under 18, a great achievement once again for this youngster from Aruba.

Final results overall: 4th place Sam Esteve (France), 3rd place Kostya Smirnoff (Russia), 2nd Place Johnny Yagen (Israel), 1st Place Steven Max (Aruba).

Now on his way back home, Steven is looking forward to the Aruba Hi-Winds from 2nd-8th of August.

Tennis: Djokovic avoids giant-killing at Wimbledon

LONDON (AFP) - Novak Djokovic avoided becoming the latest star to crash out of Wimbledon as the world number one recovered from a slow start to defeat American qualifier Bobby Reynolds 7-6 (7/2), 6-3, 6-1 in the second round on Thursday.

While several of Djokovic's title rivals have fallen foul of the shock defeats and injury withdrawals that have rocked Wimbledon over the last four days, the 26-year-old has progressed serenely to the last 32 and is yet to drop a set.

Both Roger Federer and Rafael Nadal suffered stunning losses at the hands of unheralded opponents in the other half of the draw, leaving Djokovic as the only former Wimbledon champion left.

And a defeat for Djokovic in his first meeting with Reynolds, the world number 156, would have been just as shocking.

But, although the Serb never hit peak form, he did enough to see off his obdurate opponent with 41 winners and 12 aces in one hour and 56 minutes.

Djokovic will play French 28th seed Jeremy Chardy or German qualifier Jan-Lennard Struff for a place in the last 16.

"It's a bit strange that so many top players lost in one or two days," Djokovic said.

"All the lower-ranked players have an extra motivation to perform their best; they have nothing to lose."

"I need to be extra-careful and with the roof closed it was a bit different, I needed some time to adjust to the conditions."

Reynolds' exit was one of the least surprising results in an otherwise shock-filled week, but it did carry historic significance as there will be no American men in the Wimbledon third round for the first time in 101 years.

Djokovic arrived at the All England Club last week desperate to erase the bitter memories of his French Open semi-final defeat against Nadal earlier this month and that setback in Paris will soon be a distant memory if he continues in this form.

The Serb had made success at Roland Garros his top priority this year, but a second Wimbledon crown to follow his triumph in 2011 would be a more than acceptable consolation prize.

With rain plaguing the All England Club for the first time this week, Djokovic would have been pleased to be scheduled under the Centre Court roof, allowing him to progress without having to wait around for the weather to improve.

NFL: Former Pats star denied bail on murder charge

NEW YORK (AFP) - Former New England Patriots star Aaron Hernandez, charged with murder in the shooting death of a man whose bloodied body was found less than a mile from his home, was denied bail on Thursday.

Hernandez was arrested on Wednesday and held on a murder charge in the death of Odin Lloyd on June 17.

He pleaded not guilty, but less than two hours after the 22-year-old tight end was arrested and led from his $1.7 million house in handcuffs, the NFL's Patriots cut ties with him.

On Thursday, Hernandez's defense team, led by Michael Fee, made an appeal for Hernandez to be released on bail.

Defense attorney James Sultan argued that Hernandez's celebrity would not allow him to flee, and said his lack of a criminal record should be considered.

Superior Court Judge Renee Duplas disagreed.

In addition to first-degree murder, Hernandez faces five gun-related charges, including carrying a firearm without a license and possession of a large-capacity firearm.

On Wednesday, prosecutor William McCauley had told a packed hearing that Hernandez and two unidentified associates had murdered Lloyd in an execution-style slaying because he was angry his friend had spoken with people he "had troubles with."

McCauley said Hernandez "orchestrated" Lloyd's execution. Suspicion fell on Hernandez almost immediately after the discovery of the 27-year-old Lloyd's body.

The Boston Globe and ABC News both reported Thursday that Hernandez is also being investigated in connection with the July 2012 drive-by shooting deaths of two men, Daniel Abreu and Safino Furtado.

Hernandez, who has played three seasons for the Patriots, received a $12.5 million bonus when he sealed a contract extension last August which took him up to 2018.

Spain beat Italy on penalties to reach Confed Cup final FORTALEZA (AFP) - Jesus Navas settled a nail-biting penalty shoot-out 7-6 for Spain as the world and European champions edged Italy on a sultry evening in Fortaleza on Thursday to set up a Confederations Cup final meeting with Brazil.

After the semi-final finished goalless following extra time, Leonardo Bonucci proved the fall guy for the Italians, blazing the 13th kick of the shoot-out over the bar before Manchester City new boy Navas calmly tucked his penalty home.

Spain will now seek to complete the set of senior international titles, having also won Olympic gold in Barcelona in 1992, but hosts Brazil were spared a 120-minute semi-final and will have had 24 extra hours to recover.

Italy were left to curse their luck after initially shackling Spain in the first half, and coach Cesare Prandelli must now galvanise minds and bodies for Sunday's meeting with Uruguay in the third-place play-off.

He will nonetheless draw solace from the way his side matched Spain, having seen Italy crushed 4-0 when the sides last met in last year's one-sided Euro 2012 final in Kiev.

Chastened by the memory of that game, Prandelli reverted to the formula he had successfully used in the 1-1 draw between the sides earlier in that tournament.

Italy lined up with a three-man defence and no fewer than six midfielders at Estadio Castelao, Claudio Marchisio and Antonio Candreva providing support for lone striker Alberto Gilardino.

Spain centre-back Gerard Pique, watched by celebrity girlfriend Shakira, could have settled the tie in the 85th minute, but he blazed over from Navas' low pass and the game went to extra time.

Italy almost broke through in the third minute of the extra period when Emanuele Giaccherini rattled the post with a rising left-foot drive.

Del Bosque elected to swap Torres for holding midfielder Javi Martinez, but it gave Spain momentum, with Pique and Jordi Alba both going close.

Substitute Juan Mata also curled wide, before Italy goalkeeper Gianluigi Buffon unconvincingly palmed a shot from Xavi onto the post and Martinez's follow-up effort evaded Mata's toes by inches.

Buffon also had to touch away a low effort from Navas as Spain threatened to snatch victory at the death, but thanks to Bonucci's misfortune, the Spain substitute would still have the final say.
